East Chicago Library Transformed into State of the Art Performance Center

The once dilapidated building that was an eye sore on the corner of Grand Boulevard and 136th Street in the Indiana Harbor has quickly been transformed into the State-of-the-Art Carnegie Visual Performing Arts Center.

The City of East Chicago and the Carnegie Performing Arts Association updated business leaders and investors on the continual progress of this remarkable transformation with the private tour held on Monday, July 20, 2009, from 3-5:00 PM.

“We are extremely proud of the progress,” said Lauren Bukovac, Carnegie campaign coordinator. “Mayor Pabey and his administration have proven to this community just how valuable the arts really are to East Chicago.”

The Carnegie Performing Arts Center will serve as a community resource to various organizations, schools and corporations and will serve as a cultural cornerstone for Mayor George Pabey’s North Harbor Revitalization Initiative.

“We are building more than homes in North Harbor,” said Mayor Pabey. “We are building dreams and this Carnegie Performing Arts Center serves as a strong foundation for education in the arts.
